FROM: Glen Cooper
DATE: July 13, 2017 4:29AM UTC
RE: Pulling out of Ethereum

If you are reading this, and I sent you a text message, just know that I have chosen to abandon ship with the whole Ethereum idea. The technology is sound, and smart contracts that are possible with Ethereum have a future in the cryptocurrency world, but in terms of a store of value, ethereum is not good. I have therefore chosen to shapeshift all ethereum investments over to an undisclosed secret store of value. For everyone's safety, I cannot speak of what I have found and which cryptocurrency I have chosen to shapeshift into.

Just know that if I contacted you in regards to an ethereum account that I set up with you in mind, and ever mentioned that I would give that ethereum to you somehow, that offer is still valid. When I created the ethereum account, I mistakenly thought it was going to be something huge someday. I was wrong. Mistakes happen. Thankfully I'm still capable of learning from my mistakes.

The exact amounts of Ether that I had in each of your accounts will forever be verifiable in the ethereum blockchain. If you ever see me again, remind me to check in my EthereumExodus folder for your name and I will help you out with whatever equivalent amount of the shapeshifted ethereum there was left before Ethereum's value crashed.

I cannot predict the future or control it. Please do not ask me for any financial advice. I would rather be silent than wrong. Do you own research and make your own decisions.

Good luck. Godspeed. I hope we see each other again someday.

~1GLENCo